BACHELOR OF SCIENCE IN HUMAN SERVICES

ON-SITE EVENING PROGRAM

PROGRAM HIGHLIGHTS

WHAT IS THE BACHELOR OF SCIENCE IN HUMAN SERVICES?

This degree program prepares graduates with the tools and experience they need to become a responsive professional equipped to succeed in a variety of human service occupations and advanced professional graduate study.

WHAT DO STUDENTS ENROLLED IN THE HUMAN SERVICES PROGRAM DO?

As a Human Services major, students develop competencies in human service practice methodologies and case management techniques in a broad based program that is grounded in a Christian worldview and seeks to both provide students with basic skills in the human services field. The program offers a variety of courses and opportunities designed to provide students with an understanding of the history and perspectives of human services and a solid background of skills and knowledge applicable to the field.

IS THIS MAJOR RIGHT FOR YOU?

You might consider a Human Services major if you have an interest in enhancing the quality of life of individuals and families in need through the development and administration of agencies involved in service delivery. Successful degree completion will prepare students to work in an administrative capacity in non-profit agencies, schools, health care centers, and other community-based organizations.
